THE SPIRIT OF SUCCESS

A Gathering of Enthusiastic and Confident Republicans.

The Commercial Travelers' Club Entertains Representative Men from Old Hendricks-Stirring Speeches.

There is more aggressive aggressiveness eler than any other individual. This is true be in business or politics. The commercial traveler adopts as his motto, "Be sure you're right, then go ahead." When he is sure he is right and starts ahead, he starts under full steam and it must be an unusually large obstacle that he won't surmount. They never do things by halves. The Commercial Travelers' Republican Club of this city gave an informal reception, at their rooms in the Union Block, last night to the Hendricks county Republicans. It was a veritable love feast at which jollity, good humor and enthuslasm prevailed. The first man who crossed the threshold wore a broad, confident smile upon his face and it remained there during the entire evening. The smile was infectious and every person in the room soon acquired entered. It was one of those hearty, happy sort of receptions where lots of jokes were gracked at the expense of some good-natured. old-time, or new-made friend, who entered into the spirit of the joke and bided his time to hit back in the same good-natured way. There was present an abundance of that close fellowship existing between men striving for the success of the same great principles-a tie that ofttimes binds more closely than the tie of blood,

By half-past 7 o'clock the neat, cozy quarters of the Commercial Travelers' Club were thrown open and lighted. In one room was a bountiful supply of light refreshments and cigars, while the other was reserved for the assemblage of the guests and their hosts. At a few minutes past 8 the delegation from Danville, over eighty strong, marched into the rooms, escorted by Harry B. Smith and a committee from the local club. A half hour was spent in getting acquainted, during which time the visitors were introduced to such of their hosts as were not al-ready old friends. Cigars were passed around and the visitors turned upon the supply of refreshments, which diminished rapidly, but was as rapidly replenished. At the expiration of the half hour all had become acquainted with one another and the best of good feeling prevailed. Hosts and guests were in just the right frame of mind to listen to speeches pointing ahead to the light that was to dispel the present darkened condition of things. Carey McPherson welcomed the guests to the home of their hosts in a ringing speech of praise for the stanch and tried Republicanism of the county from which they came and a history of their hosts. The organization known as the Commercial Travelers' Republican Club was organized the day after the defeat of 1892. With that crash still ringing in their ears, a half dozen loyal Republican traveling men met in the rooms in the Union Block and, with uplifted hands, vowed to continue what had been intended as a temporary organization till such time as a Republican President should again be seated in the White House. He referred briefly to the acts of the Democratic party since it came into power, touching on the Hawaiian affair, the Wilson bill, the pension suspensions and the financial condition. He concluded by bidding the guests thrice welcome to the rooms of their fellow-Republicans, striving with them for the victory of the great principles which made our Nation the greatest on the face of the The welcome was responded to by Enoch G. Hogate, on behalf of the visitors. In an-

club, Mr. Hogate said: "I know we are Wherever two or three Republeans are gathered together talking of the living principles which give them existence as a party, there also, other Republicans are always welcome. We come here o-night with eighty-five stanch Republic-Ins: that is just one Republican for every thousand votes of our plurality next fall (Laughter and great applause). We used to give these tremendously large pluralities and I think we could do it again if necessary, and the appearance of the horizon here of late seems to point to a necessity. The best Republicans in the whole country are the commercial travelers. They are going up and down the length and breadth of the country and meeting the individtais. They are feeling the political pulse of the Nation, and they see and know the politteal ailments of the country, and their knowledge of events gives them an insight Into the remedies needed. We are here tonight to get in touch with you and to counsel with brother Republicans. We are here to train to keep step to the music of the Union. Who ever heard of a Democrat keeping step to that music? Now is the appointed time for action. The time never was so ripe for Republican victories as now in 1894. Every act of the Democratic party since it came into power has been an incentive to bury the pipe of jeace, to dig up the tomahawk, to daub on the war paint and go to battle. (Great applause). Talk of the Democrats being friendly to a pension system. Ugh! It puts a dark brown taste in my mouth to think of such an anomaly. Their infamous Wilson bill is a death stab at all our industries, whether they be protected or unprotected, for one is ifacturer is dependent upon the farmer. Each must have the products of the other. Suppose the Wilson bill passes, what will be the result? When the commercial travelers representing D. P. Erwin & Co., or Murphy, Hibben & Co., go into the field, they will have to go into competition with the commercial traveler from the Manchester and Liverpool houses."

swer to the hearty welcome extended by the

Mr. Hogate then roasted the "grassburner" to a crisp brown on his attitude on the tariff question and his statements to the committee from the potters that it was the intention to reduce the American to the same level as the European workngman. He graphically described the labor of the little Welsh girl in a coal mine, a thousand feet under the ground and said, "We don't want our daughters bred In the bowels of the earth. We want them raised on the surface of God's green world in the sunshine and free open air. We want them educated and fitted to be true mothers of the Republic." An allusion by the speaker to General Harrison was the signal for uprearious applause. Upon the Hawaiian flasco he said that the United States should permit no country to get a stronger footing there than it did. should be the policy of the United States to say to the European monarchs, when any monarchy of this hemisphere threw off the yoke of royalty, "hands off, this country shall be permitted to embrace true liberty in the republican form of government." As Mr. Hogate concluded and took his seat he was applauded in that hearty manner that left no doubt as to the appreciation of his well-aimed hits. Captain Hamrich, a farmer from Hendricks county and a member of the Legislature, was called on for a speech, and after saying that he could not make one. proceeded to disprove his own statement by the truly eloquent and soul-stirring manner in which he arraigned Democracy for its vacillating policy of continual negation. He spoke with an earnestness that was infectious, and his auditors were kept continually applauding his hard, straightforward blows at flimsy pretexts, or convulsed with laughter at the act way in which he illustrated his arguments in some ludicrous manner. When he said, "If eternal vigilance had been the price of liberty in 1861 the United States Senate would not to-day be disgraced by the presence in it of D. W. Voorhees," his auditors became so uproarious in their applause that it was several minutes before he could proceed. When at last quiet was restored to such a degree that he could be heard he continued his bitter arraignment of the senior Senator from this State, and included with him Hoke Smith. He concluded by saying that he considered Voorhees and Smith "one link of sausage manufactured from the same dog James Watson, of Rushville, was also called upon for a speech, and responded with an eloquence that held his auditors spellbound during the entire time he was speaking, save upon the occasion when the spell would be broken by a spontaneous burst of applause. He eulogized the memory of Blaine, Morton and Lincoln, whose portraits hung upon the wall, and his allusion to General Harrison was greeted with a deafening tumult of cheering and hand-clapping. In graphic terms he pictured the desolution and ruin of the world's fair ground by the recent fire, and compared it to the present condition of business. "Sadder than the waste at Chicago," he said, "Is the devastation that lies in the wake of the march of Democracy through this country for the past ten months. W. Fessler spoke briefly and expressed his utmost confidence in victory, when such an enthusiastic gathering could be had at this time, ten months before the election. A meeting at this time, as full of en-thusiasm as might be expected in a meeting the week or day preceeding an election, could mean but one thing-success.

stirring speech in a humorous strain, which captivated his auditors completely, and left hem with that sort of a good feeling that makes them at peace with themselves and all their fellows. William L. Taylor answered a call by speaking upon the potency of clubs in a political campaign, on which he is an acknowledged authority. Judge Hadley, W. R. The reception continued till nearly 11 o'clock, at which hour the guests departed for their Hendricks county homes. It was the most enthusiastic gathering of Repubicans that has been held in this State for months and the feeling of fellowship that was created will be felt throughout the entire campaign now fast approaching. It seemed last night as if the campaign must have suddenly burst forth in all its heat. Among the prominent citizens of Hendricks county present were Enoch G. Hogate, W. R. McClelland, Maj. J. B. Homan, Judge John V. Hadley, O. M. Piersol, J. E. Humston, John W. Tinder, Hon. J. W. Hamrick, James L. Clark, C. C. Hadley and W. L. Wilson.

MINISTER TO JERUSALEM.

Protege of the Courthouse Ring Lookfng for Another Job. For several days past the chair in the county clerk's office usually occupied by Leopold Daniels has been vacant. Inquiry as to the cause of this chair being unoccupied has developed the fact that its ocupant is in Washington, D. C., where he s importuning his friends to intercede for him with the administration. His labors are proving effective and Indiana men generally in Washington are urging upon the President the appointment of the deputy clerk as minister to Jerusalem. It is said that Daniels has a "cinch" upon the ap-pointment. If this be true it is but another evidence of the potency of the courthouse ring, of which Daniels is a protege. Another deputy clerk has been urged upon inistration for ministerial appointment and claims to have assurance that he will be appointed. It has been suggested that fearing the uncertainty of the continued existence of the ring after the fall election, its various proteges are casting about for other lucrative employment with-

Death of George G. Stevens. George G. Stevens, secretary and treasarer of the Indianapolis Abattoir Company, died yesterday afternoon at his home in Woodruff Place. He was a leading member of the Baptist Church, a man of much culture and postic sentiment, and an artist of no mean ability. Fond of books and a great reader, he took the utmost interest and enjoyment in the formation of classes of young people for the study of literature. His loss will be deeply deplored by his many friends, Mr. Stevens came from Cambridge, Mass., and leaves a wife and three young children, the oldest aged eight years.

STORY OF A GREAT PICTURE The American Derby Day Preserved in a

Grand Painting.

Theodore Groll, of Dusseldorf, Germany, the Artist-The Painting Now on Exhibit at the Kingston-An Art Gallery at the Kingston Which Is Open to the Public-William Tron as a Collector of Choice Canvases.

The most magnificent racing event of the century was the American Derby at Chicago, Saturday, June 24, 1893, for $60,000 stakes and at which there were over sevenone of phenomenal beauty and the imdependent upon the other. The farmer is | mense throng and radiant glimpses of color dependent upon the manufacturer and the made the scene worthy the highest effort of a great artist to piace it in imperishable

> It occurred to William Tron, of this city, weeks before this great event came off that he would greatly like to be the owner of a painting representing this great scene. Having made up his mind to secure it money was no object, the only difficulty in the way being embodied in the question, "Whom can I get who will be capable of placing this scene upon canvas?" For a time this seemed an almost insurmountable difficulty, but at last he secured the man above all others best qualified for this great artistic achievement. This was Theodore Groll, of Dusseldorf, who was then at the world's fair as one of the judges from Germany in the art department.

> Mr. Tron made no mistake in his selection of an artist for Mr. Groll showed himself to be up to the level of the great work required of him. The moment chosen for the picture was the one when the magnificent Boundless, winner of the race, passed under the string amid the enthusiastic acclamations of thousands, followed by St. Leonard, Clifford, Aldebaron, Chorister and G. W. Johnson, with the remainder of the field of fifteen trailing behind. Such a picture could not be secured by one man's unaided effort. Two photographers, one of them Mr. Powers, then of this city, took instantanoeus views of the thrilling scene while the artist was busily engaged in sketching groups in the foreground and noting the kaleidoscopic changes and brilliant colors which he would reproduce in this picture. The horses and jockeys are absolutely true to life, and the figure and action of Garrison, the famous jockey, as well as the triumphant Boundless in this, the supreme moment of both lives, is marvelously true in every detail. No one but a great scenic artist coule portray such a scene instinct with life moving with excitement and the mass of people in immense amphitheater as well as the less compact throng in the foreground gorgeous in color. Mr. Groll has been engaged upon this painting, a canvas four by eight feet, for six months, and Mr. Tron, even before its completion when the grand character of the work began to develop, was tempted with large sums of money by Chicago people to part with it. Thus far he declined all offers for this painting, which is valued at $4,000. The H. Lieber Company, of this city, has given it a worthy frame, a rich gilt ten inches deep, which makes the picture and frame cover a space of five and one-half feet wide by Tron has hung this great canvas

Tron extends an invitation to all residents of Indianapolis and to all visitors to call and see this great painting. He asks this without any regard to patronage but purely for the sake of art, and for the benefit of the public. The Kingston has in addition to "The American Derby" a dozen other paintings of high morit. Mr. Tron is developing as an art patron and his collection is now the best in the city. Among the noticeable pictures is one portraying the Western Union Appeals Its Tax Suit-Cases in Police Court-A Judgment Remitted.

Charles Kahl appeared in the Criminal Court yesterday to answer to the citation to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. The affidavit upon which the citation against Kahl was issued charges him with attempting to influence the action of certain members of the grand jury in their investigations into the Fulford case. He appeared to the citation last Saturday, and a motion to dismiss the rule, filed by his attorney, was overruled by the court, and the case set for hearing yesterday morning. At that time Kahl came in with his answer and found additional affidavit filed against him. His attorneys asked time to prepare an answer to this additional affidavit, and the case was again set down for hearing 2 o'clock next Saturday afternoon.

The additional affidavit charges that Kahl was not an old friend of Henry Hartman's, and also that Kahl attempted influence the action of other members the grand jury. The grounds upon which the charges are based are that Kahl gave cigars and drinks to the grand jurors, and told them he was an old friend of Fulford's, and asked the grand jurors to investigate Fulford's side of the case.

SUIT APPEALED.

Western Union Takes the Tax Case to the Supreme Court.

The Western Union Telegraph Company yesterday appealed to the Supreme Court its suit against Thomas Taggart as Auditor of Marion county and others, to enjoin the collection of the State tax. The appeal enjoys the distinction of being the first copy of a printed transcript ever filed in the Supreme Court, a somewhat unusual thing. The suit was first brought in the Marion Circuit Court a month ago to enjoin the collection of $7,237.60, the assessment upon the Black Peau de Soie Western Union Company's property for State purposes. The company is willing to pay city, county and corporation taxes upon the valuation of $2,297,652 fixed upon its property by the State Board of Tax Commis-sioners, but draws the line at contributing anything for State purposes. Its line is in eighty-four counties and by making the test case now in the Supreme Court it saves a multiplicity of suits and much expensive litigation. A demurrer was filed in the Circuit Court by the Attorney-general, who represents the State's interests and who simply claimed that the Western Union's complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Judge Brown, of the Marion Circuit Court, sustained this demurrer and Butler, Snow & Butler, attorneys for the telegraph company, yester-day took the case to the Supreme Court as

A BOLD SNEAK THIEF.

School Teacher Robbed of $26 on the Threshold of Her Home.

Miss Emma McAllister, a teacher in the city schools, was robbed of her pocketbook and $26 about 6 o'clock last night. She was the victim of a sneak thief, who grabbed her pocket-book and ran. Miss Mc-Allister lives at No. 384 Ash street, and was entering her front gate when the robbery occurred. She had been to a grocery on College avenue, and noticed, as she anproached her home, that a colored man was following her. She paid no attention to him until she reached the gate. As she was about stepping into the yard the negro suddenly ran close behind her and caught at the purse she carried in her hand. With some difficulty he wrested it from her and then made off. The young lady screamed oudly and was heard by a number of people in the vicinity. They supposed that the noise meant nothing serious, and the thief escaped without pursuit. Miss McAllister noticed that he was young, and she thinks she will be able to recognize him.

MISLAID HIS DIAMONDS.

Nat Goodwin Has a Bad Half Hour During the Matinee Yesterday.

Nat Goodwin, who closed his engagement at the Grand Opera House here last night, quite a scare yesterday afternoon. When the matinee performance was about half over he discovered that he had lost or mislaid two diamond rings which cost him just $720. For a few moments he could not recollect when or where he had last seen them and "Sheriff Jim Radburn" was about as much perplexed in spirit as when in the play he discovers that Kate Vernon didn't love him and does love another fellow. Suddenly he remembered he had left them on the washstand at his room in the Bates House, and Manager George Appleton went over to the hotel in a hurry. Clerk "Billy" Holt had the rings win's dinner, which the comedian had eaten in his room, having discovered and turned the valuables in at the desk. The "Sheriff" heaved a sigh of relief when the rings were handed to him five minutes later as he stood in the entrance waiting his cue, and at supper last night he handed the honest waiter a five-dollar bill. What made Mr. Goodwin more than ordinarily anxious about the rings was the fact that some years ago, when playing "The Gold Mine" here, he sent a small boy from his dressing room at the Grand with a twenty-dollar bill to buy him a box of cigarettes. The boy, unlike the cat, failed to come back, and the trate come dian was out both the money and the cigarettes. Caught by a Marked Bill. Albert Weber, a clerk employed at Kimmell's grocery, corner of Park avenue and Eighth street, was arrested yesterday by Merchant officer Warner and charged with larceny. Weber does not deny that he has been robbing his employer. The latter has been sick for some time and the daily receipts of the store have been disappearing rapidly. Recently the wife of the proprietor grew suspicious of the clerk and planned to catch him. Yesterday she accomplished the desired end, with the assistance of her brother. The latter secured a peculiarly marked bill and presented it at the store as payment for groceries. Mrs. Kimmell was made familiar with the plot and when the bill did not find its way to the cash drawer she called in an officer and ordered the arrest of the clerk. The bill was found on his person, and he made no further attempt to clear himself. Weber is about twenty years of age. His parents are respectable people and live at Bellefontaine and Eleventh streets.

Patrick O'Keefe was adjudged to be not insane by an insanity inquest held yesterday afternoon. On last Monday he was tried for the murder of James Eubanks, and the court instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty on the grounds all ready for him in the office, the waiter, of insanity, which it did. After the verwho went after the remains of Mr. Good- diet O'Keefe was ordered held till an inquest could sit upon the question of his sanity. A number of witnesses who had known O'Keefe for years were called and testified that they believed him to be of sound mind. A question was raised as to whether he could be discharged from the custody of the sheriff without an order to that effect from Judge Cox, but it was decided that the finding that he was sane ended the affair and he was released.
